

Databases of the Month: AncestryPlus & HeritageQuest

By Carah Smith, Library Manager,
Kahuku Public & School Library

Are you trying to fill some branches on your family tree? Want to learn more about those relatives that your grandmother never wants to talk about?

Well, this is your lucky day. The Hawai'i State Public Library System has two databases that will answer exactly those questions. AncestryPlus and HeritageQuest are genealogical databases that will help in your family history searches. Used together, these two resources will help expand even the most mysterious family tree.

AncestryPlus, a library equivalent of the popular subscription website Ancestry.com, is a good place to begin your genealogical search. It covers census; birth, marriage, and death; immigration and naturalization; military service and pension records; and much more.

The census database contains images and indexes for all years of the decennial United States Federal Census from 1790-1930. Most years have an every-name index; some years are searchable only by the head of household.

Indexes for birth, marriage, and death records help to place your ancestors in specific locations at definite points in time. Military service records can tell you how and where your ancestor fought in American wars, as well as any awards or medals they received. Immigration records give information on the country of origin of your family, which will help in tracing your family tree beyond American soil.

HeritageQuest, a genealogical database offered through ProQuest, has indexes and images for most of the United States Federal Censuses from 1790 through 1930. This database is searchable by name or location; you can view images of the census pages for individual family members or for entire towns.

HeritageQuest also has a useful family and local history book search. Using person names and place keywords, you can search through local history publications to find more information on the places your ancestors lived. Using the Publications search, you can browse through family histories that have been privately printed. Many of these resources are only available in print at the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C.; now they are available online through HeritageQuest.

AncestryPlus is available on the public access computers in any library branch. HeritageQuest can be accessed in the libraries or from home using your Hawai'i library card number. Both databases update their information frequently, so you can always find new and additional information to beef up your exciting stories.

Thrill your family at your next luau by telling all the stories they never wanted to know . . .

HSPLS Awarded $1.1 Million Federal LSTA Grant

By Paul H. Mark

The Hawai'i State Public Library System is the recipient of a $1.1 million federal grant for fiscal year 2005 from the Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS).

IMLS, located in Washington, D.C., distributes these funds annually through state library agencies across the United States, as part of the Library Services and Technology Act (LSTA).

"Without this Federal funding, HSPLS would not be able to function," said State Librarian Jo Ann Schindler. "We have been using LSTA funds to maintain and expand our automation system, pay for Online Computer Library Center (OCLC) cataloging and interlibrary loan services, and acquire online databases and other resources."

"We are very grateful to the Institute of Museum and Library Services and to our Congressional delegation, who have been long-standing and effective advocates for public library services," Schindler said.

How do LSTA funds assist and benefit the Hawai'i State Public Library System and its library customers? In Federal Fiscal Year 2003, LSTA funds paid for:

- subscriptions to over 40 databases and other online resources;
- annual maintenance cost for the Horizon automation system;
- purchase of 34 computers with upgraded specifications to enhance Horizon software performance;
- purchase of 30 HP replacement printers;
- annual cost of the enriched content for the Public Access Catalog;
- renewal of 1,200 anti-virus corporate licenses for client station installation;
- purchase of 50 additional Office XP Pro MS supplemental licenses;
- annual license for a CIPA (Child Internet Protection Act) filter;
- OCLC "Copyright in the Digital Age" training workshop for participants from public, academic, school, and special libraries; archives; museums; and State government agencies.

These benefits facilitated:

- 1.4 million HSPLS web page "hits" for the 11-month period of February - December 2004
- Public Access Catalog use (July 2003-June 2004): 603,038 log-ins; 2.54 million keyword searches, and 516,119 requests placed.

The goal of IMLS is to assist the states in reaching the underserved people in their communities, using current electronic technology.

Online database information services are available 24/7 via the HSPLS website: www.librarieshawaii.org. Click on "Other Databases" to see a list of over 40 helpful and interesting databases that the Hawai'i State Public Library System offers as a free service to its library customers. For some databases, you will need your Hawai'i library card number to gain access.

New Copiers @ Your Library

As a convenience to Hawai'i State Public Library System customers, the Hawai'i Library Foundation has provided new copier machines for your local library.

Through a multi-year lease agreement with Hawai'i Business Equipment, the Foundation has placed Toshiba digital laser copiers in 50 public libraries statewide. These black-and-white copiers are faster than previous library copiers, and make clear, letter-sized copies. The cost per copy will continue to be 15 cents each.

Although the Toshiba copier does not have legal-sized paper, it can quickly and easily reduce legal-size documents to letter size. In addition, customers who anticipate doing multiple copying are requested to bring a supply of coins, as dollar bill changers are no longer available.
